Hyundai on Tuesday launched its new Avante sedan, the first fully revamped model in five years.

The launch was held online due to the coronavirus epidemic.

The sedan, which boasts a sleek, stylish look and drive-centered interior, had already proved to be a hit with record pre-orders of some 17,000 units.

Adopting a new platform, the sedan is as big as a mid-sized car, with the chassis 25 mm wider and the wheelbase 20 mm longer than its predecessor.

Lower seats create more room overhead. The car is also equipped with advanced safety and convenience features.

The gasoline model is priced at W15.31 million to W23.92 million, and the LPG model costs W18.09 million to W21.67 million (US$1=W1,218).
