Samsung is set to start taking pre-orders for its new budget smartphone next week ahead of its release a week later.

Priced at W370,000, the Galaxy A31 has five cameras in front and back, and comes with most of the high-spec features seen in Samsung's models (US$1=W1,236). However, it does not support a 5G connection.

But Samsung plans to release 5G-enabled budget phones soon.

They are expected to come with price tags of around W500,000 to W700,000, which would be a bit pricy but still affordable.
