Lee Se-dol

Go or baduk champion Lee Se-dol, who has announced his retirement saying humans can no longer beat computer one final match against a so-called artificial intelligence program later this month.

He will be paid W150 million plus an additional W50 million for every game he wins against HanDol, developed by LNH, in a total of three games (US$1=W1,185).

The first and second games will take place in Seoul, while the third will be held in South Jeolla Province, where Lee v HanDol came third at the China Securities Cup World AI Open in China in August this year.

Lee is the only human being to have beaten Google DeepMind's proto-artificial intelligence program AlphaGo.
